Sue Partridge's
Annalee Doll Collection

Most of them are Christmas themed, but she does have a few that are Halloween and Easter as well.

The sizes of the dolls in her collection range from 3-inch ornaments she hangs on a small tree to an 18-inch Santa and Mrs. Claus and reindeer, which is one of her favorites in her collection.

Sue mostly purchases the dolls herself, but she received a few as gifts from a friend, including an 8-inch cat with red bells, which is another favorite of hers. She's even started collections for her granddaughters, although the youngest was actually scared of it!

Sue loves collecting the Annalee dolls because, "they're all so unique and different."

Sue first became interested in Annalee dolls after a Christmas home tour when she saw the little elves peeking out everywhere. She has been collecting them ever since and today possesses between 150 and 200 different Annalee dolls.

While she started out at first collecting the elves, she has a variety of different kinds now.

For a limited time only, Mary Wietharn's military collection will be on display from Nov. 3rd - Nov. 11th in honor of Veteran's Day. She received the items from her brother from when he was commissioned in Kuwait, Diego Garcia, and the Philippines as a Captain in the Seabees.
